Issue #4: April 1, 2017

Tip: Are you reluctant to attend career and professional events because they are a waste of time? Instead of thinking about them as networking, consider these events as opportunities to do career research. Go to learn more about the career paths and current jobs of at least two new people—even if they are not in your academic discipline. Follow-up with a brief "nice to meet you" note via LinkedIn's connection request. Set up a follow-up informational interview or get a referral for one.

DID YOU KNOW?

April 3-7, 2017 is Graduate Student Appreciation week! Take five minutes right now to review the complete schedule of events. Pick a few events to attend and add them to your calendar.

Upcoming PhD Events

Ever wonder how PhD students figure out what they are going to do with their degree? Are you curious about how recent PhD graduates find that great position? ...If so, come to:

1st Annual Graduate Alumni Communi-TEA

Monday, 4/3, 4:30-6 PM

Grand Ballroom Lounge, 1st floor Stamp Union

This is a casual event where you will hear from successful UMD alumni who earned their PhD or Master's degree. Hear how they navigated the journey from graduate school to their chosen careers in a variety of industries.

Uncomfortable at events like this? No worries, all you have to do is show- we'll take care of the rest. We prefer that you REGISTER for this event but last minute walk-ins are also welcome!

Career & Professional Development Resources & Tools

Tool of the Week:
Interview Stream
Interview Stream is accessible inside of your C4T account (on the shortcut menu to the right). This tool allows you to conduct your own mock interview by selecting typical interview questions to answer and then videoing your responses to them. You can see how you did and also practice until you get it right! There are also quick tutorials that show you how to best answer these typical questions. This is a great tool to help you practice and improve your interviewing skills. Share your video and schedule an appointment with Dr. Susan Martin to get some feedback on your responses.
